

Right to Information Act 2009

MAST Disclosure of Information Policy

Background and purpose of policy

The Right to Information Act 2009 (RTI Act) commenced on 1 July 2010 and provides for greater access to information held by government bodies by:

- Authorising and encouraging greater routine disclosure of information held by public authorities without the need for requests or applications;
- Authorising and encouraging greater active disclosure of information held by public authorities in response to informal requests without the need for applications;
- Giving members of the public an enforceable right to information held by public authorities; and
- Providing that access to information held by government bodies is restricted in only limited circumstances which are defined in the Act.

Marine and Safety Tasmania is a public authority. As such, it is required to comply with the RTI Act.

The purpose of this policy is to set out how MAST will address the requirements of the RTI Act.

Application of Policy

This policy applies to all Marine and Safety Tasmania staff.

Definition

In this policy, the following definition applies:

information" means –

- (a) anything by which words, figures, letters or symbols are recorded and includes a map, plan, graph, drawing, painting, recording and photograph; and
- (b) anything in which information is embodied so as to be capable of being reproduced;

Policy on Access to Documents

MAST is committed, as far as practicable, to providing access to information without recourse to the RTI Act. Information is made available via our website, through publications (e.g. fact sheets, or discussion papers), and by way of reports (e.g. our Annual Report).

If you cannot find the information via one of the means above it may also be released administratively on request to MAST.

Decisions as to the release of the requested information that is not already available are made within the guidelines of the RTI Act, taking into consideration the factors relating to exemptions and public interest.

If it is not freely available, we will assist you in making an application for an assessed disclosure.

Responsibilities and decision-making

As the “principal officer” under the RTI Act, the Chief Executive Officer of MAST is responsible for determining the outcome of RTI applications. The Chief Executive Officer has delegated their responsibility to an RTI Officer as outlined below.

The RTI Officer is responsible for making initial decisions regarding the release of documents within the time periods set out in the RTI Act. The RTI Officer may liaise with prospective applicants and MAST staff regarding access to information.

If the applicant requests a formal internal review of decisions made by the RTI Officer, the Chief Executive Officer is responsible. The Ombudsman can also review the matter further.

Applications for Access to Information

Applications for information not already available by other means must be made on the application form available on the website.

If you are unable to access the form, please note that your application must be in writing and include the information requested in the form. This is a requirement of Regulation 4 of the Right to Information Regulations 2021.

Charging

A person applying for access to information under the RTI Act must pay the application fee at the time of application. The fees and charges are specified in the RTI Act.

You may apply to have the fee waived if:

- you are in financial hardship – we take that to mean that you are on income support payments (we would usually ask to see evidence that you are in receipt of Centrelink or veterans’ affairs payments);
- Where you are a member of parliament and the application is in connection with your official duty or
- You can give us information that shows that the information sought is intended for use for a purpose of general public interest or benefit.

Make sure you have looked for the information before you make a formal application. If the information is otherwise available, your application may be refused without the return of your application fee.
